

St. Johnsbury Caledonian.

St. Johnsbury, Vt., Friday, August 10, 1883.

Weather Record.
At Bingham's drug store, for the week ending August 5, 1883.
	Highest.	Lowest.
Thursday.	76	46
Friday.	70	56
Saturday.	68	48
Sunday.	68	53
Monday.	72	51
Tuesday.	77	54
Wednesday.	77	52

Local News.

The Caledonian county agricultural fair will be held September 18, 19 and 20.

Rev. Wm. L. Noyes will preach at the Free Will Baptist church next Sunday.

There being a full in the frequent showers, the street sprinkler has again made its appearance.

Will those who have Lizzie Tobin, one of the Fresh Air children, communicate with Mrs. C. L. Morrill?

N. Mearns of Waterford shows some well-leaved wheat. He has three acres, from which he expects to harvest one hundred bushels.

The members of the Advent society went to Lunenburg Wednesday, and joined people from Victory in a picnic at that place.

The Poorhouse meeting will be regularly held hereafter at 7:30 on Thursday evenings, conducted by members of the Y. M. C. A.

The court expenses for Caledonian county for the year ending July 31, were $2,638.38, as against $5,536.69 in 1881 and $10,238.53 in 1879.

H. S. Root of Newport has bought the furniture business of C. A. Calderwood on Railroad street. It is understood that Mr. Calderwood will continue the business.

The fire alarm bell will be removed today, Friday, from its old location to the new tower of the M. E. church. During its removal, the public are cautioned against any accidental alarm.

The St. Johnsbury M. E. district camp-meeting opens at Lyndonville, commencing August 27 and closing the following Saturday. By this arrangement, the objection to Sunday meetings is obviated.

L. I. Block, one of the gentlemen from Boston, spoken of in last week's paper, visited Hector Lodge, Good Templars, Monday evening and spoke concerning the order, which he joined in New York city.

A St. Johnsbury young lady, whose rural privileges have been somewhat limited, realized the ambition of her life the other day, by playing the Goddess of Liberty to a haymaker's chariot. There is poetry even in a load of hay.

There is nothing small about St. Johnsbury. Therefore, her people are glad that Union hall at Bellows Falls is being repaired. We doubt not that the Bellows Falls people will be equally generous-minded when the opportunity is afforded.

Samuel J. Blodgett, formerly of Stanwood, died at Manchester, N. H., July 25, aged forty-four years. His remains were taken to Stanwood on the following Tuesday for interment by the Manchester lodge of Knights of Honor of which he was a member.

Lyman H., the oldest son of Dr. S. T. Brooks, who has been in the west for over three years, is shipper for Scott & Hanks, lumberers, at Tongue River, Wyoming. Last week he shipped fifty-five carloads, numbering 1105 fat hives, to Chicago.

On Friday a game of ball was played at the Twin Mountain house, between teams from that house and the Maplewood house at Bethlehem, resulting in a victory for the Twin Mountain nine by a score of 25 to 5, four members of the Muffins club of this town playing with this club.

Many who have opened their homes to the Fresh Air children, have become very much attached to the little folks, and contemplate the separation soon to take place with feelings of deep regret. If some of the little folks were only orphans, they would find permanent instead of temporary homes.

Arrangements are being made for a basket picnic for all the "Fresh Air children" on Tuesday of next week. Will all persons who have any of the children, please call at the Y. M. C. A. rooms on Saturday and learn more particulars about the arrangements? All who are interested in the children are invited to join them with a lunch basket.

A large party went from this place to Willoughby lake on Tuesday and returned on Wednesday. The scenery at Willoughby is unsurpassed for beauty, and the fact that it is to be found on our own doors, as it were, should not detract from one's enjoyment of it. The drive there is a pleasant one, and for a two-day's trip, no more satisfactory one can be desired.

An excursion to Lake Memphremagog will be made from along the line of the Passumpsic road north of Wells River, Saturday, Aug. 11. Train leaves St. Johnsbury at 7:58 a. m., arriving at Newport at 10:45, O'Neil's Head 11:45. Returning leaves Newport at 5:00 p. m. and arrives at St. Johnsbury at 6:44. Fare for the round trip, including the trip on the steamer "Lady of the Lake," $1.

Judge W. D. Harriman of Ann Arbor, Mich., who has been renewing his acquaintance with the scenes and friends of his boyhood days in Peacham, on his return back with him the old sickle with which he earned his bread by the sweat of his brow in the harvest season thirty-five years ago. The Ypsilanti Sentinel makes this note:

pliment of by-gone days the text of a half-column retrospective article.

The Lake road offers special arrangements and rates to those attending the union temperance camp-meeting at Morrisville, Aug. 14, 15 and 16. Trains will leave St. Johnsbury at 9:00 a. m., 3:30 and 5:00 p. m., arriving at the camp-ground at 11:30 a. m. and 5:48 and 9:25 p. m. Fare for the round trip is $1.25, and sixty cents for children under fifteen years of age. Trains will leave the camp-ground at 5:00 a. m., 12:15 and 7:30 p. m., arriving at St. Johnsbury at 4:45 a. m., 2:30 and 10:00 p. m.

The glitter is beginning to wear from the trappings of the Forepaugh show. For instance: At Burlington an alleged pickpocket was marched into the ring, said to have been apprehended by one of the "official detectives" traveling with the show. The affair turns out to have been a mere advertising dodge on the part of Forepaugh, as the "pickpocket" was afterwards discovered among the circus employees, helping to load the cars. Rather small business for so great a show.

In last week's issue appeared the announcement of the death of Edward F. Dean, formerly of St. Johnsbury, of infirmation of the bowels, at Estelline, Dakota. His death occurred very suddenly, after an illness of less than a week. His son was located twenty-two miles away and did not reach his father's bedside until life was extinct. He came to that place June 19 and opened a furniture store. T. G. Brown, formerly of East Hardwick, writes the Caledonian that Mr. Dean was doing well in business, and had made many friends who regret his sudden death.

A correspondent of the Hartford Post, who recently passed through this place, writes to that paper: "At St. Johnsbury, noted principally for Fairbanks scales and fast horses, we found the depot platform thronged with a great crowd of the solid yeomanry of the country grocery stores. Among the boys I noticed a large number of festive newspaper men, presidents, statesmen and ministers." Large number of festive newspaper men! It must have been Forepaugh day, when Harpers, Camp, Blake, and all the other fellows, were walking around with their pockets full of tickets.

C. H. Sage has been very active during the past week in the interest of the Fresh Air children. In addition to providing places for them, he has tried to make it pleasant for the little ones, in taking them to ride and giving them a chance to enjoy the ride and the scenery and in gathering wild flowers, one child, accustomed to fresh air and the green hills of Vermont, who was playing with some of the little strangers, was given a ride with the little as the result of a mistake; but the little one enjoyed it no more than Mr. Sage, and it is questionable whether the little folks have derived any more happiness from his attentions than he has derived from the satisfaction of conferring pleasure upon them.

Revs. T. W. Jenkins and B. M. Tillotson of this place attended the Universalist camp-meeting at Weirs, which closed a four-days' session on Sunday evening, with two thousand people present. On Sunday morning Mr. Tillotson delivered an address on "The Joy of Universalism."

C. C. Bingham and family started for Old Orchard beach on Monday morning.

W. W. Sprague returned on Monday from a two-weeks' stay at Kennebunkport, Me. His family remains another week.

Col. Franklin Fairbanks delivered his lecture on birds in the chapel of the Congregational church at East Hardwick on Tuesday evening.

Rev. Dr. Barstow preached in the South church on Sunday morning and addressed the union meeting at that church in the evening.

Misses Agnes and Isabel Fairbanks and Mary E. Stone are at Prout's Neck for a few days.

Rev. E. W. Colver will return from his vacation this week, accompanied by his family, and will occupy his pulpit next Sunday.

A. L. Bailey and wife will spend next week at Burlington, on a visit to Manager Hall of the Burlington press.

E. A. Abbott, a composer of the Caledonian office, leaves town to-day, Thursday, to take a "sit" on the Lowell (Mass.) Morning Mail.

E. C. Chamberlain, Esq., of St. Louis, Mo., and his sister, Mrs. Lutz, with her husband and four children, from Lincoln, Ill., passed the Sabbath and two or three days of this week in town, visiting the friends and scenes of their early years.

Dr. Perkins and son start this Friday for the beach, where they will be for two weeks.

Presentation of the Portrait of Col. Chamberlain.

Chamberlain post, G. A. R., is to be the recipient, from the friends of Colonel Chamberlain, in honor of whom the post is named, who reside in Ohio, of a portrait of the colonel. The portrait has arrived, and it is designed to make the presentation a public occasion, in which all interested in the subject and the cause for which he gave his life may participate. A public meeting will be held in Music hall some evening next week, the evening to be announced by posters, when the portrait will be formally presented and accepted, with appropriate speeches. The new military company will be invited to turn out and do escort duty, and the occasion will be an important event in the history of Chamberlain post.

The Southern Accident.

From the Newport Express we learn the following particulars relative to the accident on the Southeastern road:

briefly referred to in our last issue: The engine, one of the large new ones recently put upon the road, was thrown nearly half round upon its side, the baggage and smoking car ran partially by the engine, the first passenger car was thrown upon its side and lay motionless across the track and upon the baggage car. It would seem this car in its course must have run against the tender as one side was nearly torn away, hardly a seat remaining in the car. It was literally demolished and bore but little resemblance to what it was a moment before, a first-class passenger coach. Those who were injured were mostly in this car and the only wonder is that any escaped alive. The first passenger car ran partially up on this demolished car and the front part was considerably damaged. The other three cars in the train remained upon the track, the inmates being only well shaken up. In the wrecked car there were probably twenty-five or more passengers most of whom were injured though some with only slight bruises.

Those injured, so far as has been ascertained, are as follows: Mrs. Warren Bowen (Rosa Ward formerly of West Derby.) severely injured; Thomas Walker, fireman, West Fairham, leg broken in two places; W. F. Pierce, Stanstead, ankle badly crushed; William Murray, Georgetown, shoulder broken; L. H. Smith, customs officer, Richmond, ribs broken; W. F. Chapman, Freilighsburg, P. Q., leg and hip badly bruised and head cut; E. V. Spencer, Ontario, injured internally; Geo. S. McKinnon, engineer, head badly bruised and cut; G. E. Thompson, Stanstead, head and body bruised and leg broken; Adrien Lavender, Montreal, leg injured; Miss Hart, Miss Dougal, Miss Hoag, Montreal, injured about face and head; conductors La Motte and Hall were considerably bruised, as were also Fred Holbridge, mail agent, and H. K. Dewey of Barton. H. C. Wilson of Troy, and two young lady friends were on board, and came out unhurt, effecting their escape through a window. Miss Kimball, a daughter of Dr. Kimball of Newport, was also on board, but escaped without injury. All of the injured people are reported to be doing well, with the exception of Mrs. Bowen, of whom some doubt is expressed. The cause of the accident cannot be definitely given. It took place at a curve, and it is quite probable that the weight of the engine, which is a large one, spread the track sufficiently to throw the trucks off the track.

Later.—Mrs. Bowen died Tuesday night. So far as known, the others hurt are doing well.

Seeks for Fresh Air Among the Green Hills of Vermont.

On Friday the first instalment of the beneficiaries of the Tribune Fresh-Air fund, forty-five in number, arrived in this place on route for Danville. They left New York Wednesday night, at six o'clock, on the steamer City of Boston, of the Norwich line. They went to the boats in small squads of from two to ten children in charge of parents, missionaries or nurses, and they came from nowhither tenement-houses in different parts of New York and Brooklyn. The party reached New London about day-break on Thursday morning, and were given a good breakfast there by Rev. Edward Bacon, of the First Congregational church. They came over the Central Vermont road to White River Junction and reached this place on the mail train due here at 4:40 p. m. They took the 5:00 train, and arrived in Danville at 6:00. The hosts of this party are Rev. T. W. Darling, James Stevens, J. P. Shippin, F. A. Morse, E. A. Dole, W. M. Dole, J. M. Dole, B. F. Haviland, F. J. Preston, A. Gillis, F. D. Stocker, M. J. Morse, J. R. Hill, Miss E. Ayer, B. N. Davis, D. D. Hall, M. Esterbrook, Dr. Durant, J. M. Weeks, Lyman Stevens and L. C. Fuller. The Tribune reporter says:

The party was made up of children many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was astonishingly quiet, and the children simply sat around looking at nothing or long over the rail of the steamer and intently watching the "longshoremen" at work on the next pier. They seemed subdued by the weight of some tremendous responsibility. There were boys and girls who lived in families of many parts of the small people, and those who had found them out in their dismal and miserable homes. But in spite of the cheerful effect of the new dresses, coats and hats the marks of the life from which the small people were escaping for a short time were visible in every young face. The party was